Construction begins

New Kewadin Casino groundbreaking — Construction began on Kewadin Shores Casino and Hotel in May of 2004. In photo L to R: Dale Nelson, St. Ignace Township supervisor, Robert LaPoint, Rob Lambert, Bernard Bouschor, Fred Paquin, Paul Shagen, Clifford Bellant, Victor Matson Sr., Denise Chase, Former St. Ignace Mayor Bruce Dodson, Martha Miller and Dennis McKelvie break the ground to get the project underway.

The structure takes shape. Darcy Chase, manager of the Kewadin Shores Casino and Lenny Adams, project site manager, look over the blueprints with the steel I-beam frame of the new Kewadin Shores rising behind them.

A crane raises the window frame to the rear of the lobby which overlooks Horseshoe Bay. The casino, entertainment room and restaurant are on the left with the hotel complex and lobby on the right.

Siding attached. Workers attached the siding and insulation to the complex. Almost 80 percent of the 500 construction workers who worked at the site were local residents from the over 40 subcontractors who participated in the construction of Kewadin Shores Casino and Hotel.

The new casino. The frame was erected in June of this year to enclose the new 25,650 square foot gaming hall.

Wishing You The Very Best Kewadin Shores

On the Cover... There is only one word to describe the main lobby of Kewadin Shores Casino & Hotel - breathtaking. Created with the help of the Sault Tribe of Chippewa Indians Cultural Department, the area incorporates traditional and Michigan culture. A circular map of the Great Lakes is the main focal point showing four directions.

The map embraces the Great Lakes and the area in which the Sault Tribe of Chippewa Indians people came from. The Great Lakes have played a vital role in the existence of the Anishinaabe people. It has given them their water routes, sustenance and beliefs in the Water Spirits. It is also a significant piece to the Sault Tribe history because of the migration of their people, as Mackinac Island was one of the migration stopping points.

In order to acknowledge and honor the Anishinaabe culture of the Sault Ste. Marie Tribe of Chippewa Indians, the casino incorporated a special rock in the entry way area overlooking Horseshoe Bay. The rock is an extension of the rock formation known as Rabbit's Back Peak, an area local area Anishinaabe people hold sacred. It is placed within the casino to honor the area and will assist in the education of the general public as to the cultural beliefs of our Tribe.
